Title: An outing

Last weekend, Ann and her family went to the country park to have a nice and relaxing picnic. After that, they planned to go to the aquarium. They felt happy because it was their first time having a picnic.

While Ann and her family were chatting and having their food, a cheeky little monkey was hiding behind an old tree. When it saw all those bananas, banana cakes, ham and cheese sandwiches, lemonade and cupcakes, it made its mouth water. "Oh! How hungry I am! How dare you eat in front of hungry me and stepping into my land!" sneered the hungry monkey.

The monkey could stand no longer, he leaped up, called all of his friends and ran closer to the family and stole all of those food. One mean little monkey even attacked poor little Ann and escaped. The family felt really miserable. All those money they use to buy those ingredients, all those good efforts would be disappearing into hungry monkey's mouths.

That was the last straw for Ann, "Enough!" she screamed green and purple smoke rose out from her feet. She was a witch in disguise! "Hoky-Pocky-Pride!" she screamed and a little branch on the ground turned into a wand, "Give us our food back or else, you will be sorry!" waving her wand. "Sorry!" the monkeys cried and gave back the food to Ann. "Thank you very much!" Ann sneered.

After they ate their food, Ann used her new magic wand to plant a banana tree. “Take care of it and it will grow up in a few days’ time and the tree is yours.” Finally Ann and her family went home happily.
