

Little Writers (Online version)

Name: Jensen Leung Ching Shun(13)

Class: P. 6A (Faith)

Title: A New Fairy tale - Jack's Crazy Adventure In Sherwood Forest

Once upon a time, there lived a kind little boy named Jack. He lived in a poor, little hut with his mother in a little village. One day, Jack's mother told him to buy some groceries in the market of the big city through Sherwood Forest few miles away. As it was Jack's first time leaving the little village into the big city, his mother told him to bring a map. Unfortunately, Jack was also a clumsy boy, so he forgot about the map when he left home.

On the way to the big city, Jack crossed Sherwood Forest. He quickly got lost since he forgot to bring his map. As he was really scared, he reached into his bag and took out his teddy bear, Tim, to comfort himself a bit. Shockingly, Jack couldn't find it anywhere! "I remembered packing Tim in my bag, he wasn't supposed to be missing!" Jack thought. Suddenly, Jack noticed that there were muddy footprints on the ground. As he thought it might be a villager that lived nearby and might show him the way. He quickly followed it.

While he was following, he bumped into a witch. On the witch's hand was Tim! Noticing Tim immediately, Jack shouted. "Give me back Tim!" "No," The witch replied, "If you want Tim back, you have to do something for me." The witch waved her wand and a house made out of broccoli suddenly appeared. "If you could eat this house, Tim is yours. But be careful! If you eat too quick and didn't digest the food, your body will become the size of a ball!" The witch told Jack. "Okay." Jack replied.

Jack first took a piece. He ate it and sat down for a while. After he felt that he has digested it, he took another one and did exactly what the witch said. He finally finished eating the house. The witch then gave Jack Tim back. But there was one more problem, he was still trapped in the forest, with no map. Fortunately, a woodcutter just came by and showed him the way out. Jack then forgot about the market and quickly went home since it was dark. Jack learnt that he should never be clumsy. Then, he and his mother lived happily ever after.

