Title: Ann and the treasure box

Today was a sunny day. Ann and the children went to the beach. They were building a sandcastle. They felt happy.

When they were building a big sandcastle, Ann saw a box floating in the sea. Then the children said, 'Is that a treasure box?' Then they said, 'Maybe inside the box there will be lots of jewels.' They felt very excited. Then the children opened the box and they saw lots of gold and money. Two of the children said, 'We can sell the gold for lots of money! We're going to be rich!' The two children felt even more excited. But Ann disagreed with the children. 'But the gold and money doesn't belong to us!' Ann said. 'But we can still sell it for lots of money! We can buy a big house and expensive toys! Plus it's free money. Don't you want free money?' the children asked. Then a man ran to the children and said, 'Hey! Why did you steal my treasure box?' Ann said, 'Sorry, we didn't mean to steal it! It just floated here.' They were worried that the man would call the police. But he forgave the children and said, 'It's fine as long as you didn't sell it.' Then the man left with a smile. Then the two children said sorry to Ann. 'We would never steal people's things ever again!' The two children said.

Then they had a wonderful day at the beach.
