

Little Writers

Name: Heather

Class: P. 4A

Title: Cheating in the Exam

This morning Anna was doing her English exam in the school hall. She was worried because she didn't do revision and the test was very difficult. She kept on pondering how to do each question and that used up a lot of time, so she became even more worried.

All of a sudden, she thought of cheating. She had never done that before, but she thought of doing it before the exam. So she slipped a piece of paper into her pencil case. She took it out as fast as she could and looked at the answers. She was very nervous.

Then, the teacher spotted her doing something and approached her to discover what she was looking at. When he got close enough to see, he wanted to just stop the exam and tell her off in front of the whole class.

In the end, she admitted that she had been cheating and promised that she would never do it again. Even though she said sorry, she still needed to be punished for cheating because it was the school rule. The teacher told her parents and they were disappointed in her. She felt really disappointed in herself too. The teacher also felt a little sorry for her and kind of wanted to make it up to her.

That afternoon, the teacher came up to her and said, 'Anna, I'm sorry for being really mad at you. I guess everyone makes mistakes.' She was very touched, so she said, 'Thank you for forgiving me.' After school she went back home feeling so much better.