Title: An Unforgettable Day

Last Sunday, my family and I went on a hike. The weather was just perfect. We packed some water and food and set off.

While walking, we saw loads of butterflies. Dad loved taking photos, so he took out his camera and started taking photos of them. We found a shady place, and started our picnic. The food was delicious and it was so relaxing but that feeling didn't last long. Some wild monkeys came and took our food! Dad and I tried to catch them, but they were as fast as the wind. In the end, we couldn't get our food back.

We were miserable. My sister and I wanted to go home, but Dad said, "It's too late to go back now. Let's just finish the hike. I know that you're starving. How about I buy you ice cream when we get there?" My sister and I agreed.

After walking for a while, we saw a waterfall. My sister and I shared a look, we both knew what we wanted to do. My sister asked, "Daddy, Mummy, can we go for a swim in the waterfall? I'm really hot. We'll stay in the waterfall lake, I promise!" But Mum explained, "No, it's too dangerous, plus we don't have any spare clothes." Since it was clear that they would not let us go for a swim in the waterfall, my sister and I hatched a plan.

We were going to wait until Mum and Dad were busy doing something and then we would take off and go to the waterfall. We waited until Dad was taking pictures and Mum was busy finding some sunscreen for us and we took off and went to look for the waterfall. We started retracing our way to the waterfall but we got lost. We didn't know what to do so we shouted for Mum and Dad. Thankfully, they heard us and ran over to us. Dad's face was as red as a tomato. He shouted at us, "What were you thinking? You could have gotten lost! What if we never found you?" We were ashamed of our behavior and did not talk again on the way home.
